The meeting was held in the auditorium of the New Masonic Temple. 13th street and New Y... k avenue, and was presided over by Mrs. John N. Speel, second vice president of the loc 'executive committee. Following the singing of "America" by the audience Mrs. Speel read the platform of the party.

Mrs. Kate Waller Barrett voiced the sentiment of the women of the world for international peace.

Contrasts Conditions.

"If we, who are in a land of peace and plenty, find it difficult to see but the dim outlines of the eternal verities through the blur of blood and smoke, and can catch but the echo of the clear high note of truth above the triumphant dim of cannon and the heartrending monotone of sigh and sob, sald Mrs, Barrett, "how can we expect the women who have their own flesh and blood at the front and who today are weeping beside the silent bier or picturing the lonely trench on the desolate battlefield, know just who is right or know just what is best to do?

"Those who are affiliated with the National Council of What propagands of all kinds carried ton the declaration of the Monroe doctrine: What propagands of all kinds carried on through a long period of years could not accomplish for Pan-Americansm, this European war has achieved.

"The war is demonstrating beyond question the fact that it will remain for the nations of the war is demonstrating beyond question the fact that it will remain for the nations of the war is demonstrating beyond question the fact that it will remain for the nations of the war is demonstrating beyond question the fact that it will remain for the nations of the war is demonstrating beyond question the fact that it will remain for the nations of the war is demonstrating beyond question the fact that it will remain for the nations of the war is demonstrating beyond question the fact that it will remain for the nations of the war is demonstrating beyond question the fact that it will remain for the nations of the war is demonstrating beyond question the fact that it will remain for the through the blur of blood and smoke, and can catch but the echo of the clear high note of truth above the triumbant din of cannon and the heart rending monotone of sigh and sob, said Mrs. Barrett. Thow can we expect the women who have their own flesh and blood at the front and who today are weeping beside the silent bier or picturing the lonely trench on the deso late battlefield, know just who is right or know Just what is best to do?

"Those who are affiliated with the National Council of Women of the National Council of Women of the National Council of Women of the United States, what of them? These 2,000,000 of women, and many others not affiliated with the council, have joined together in one of the most magnificent mobilizations of women that the two the same states and friends and the same states and friends and the same states and friends and the same table and discuss with as ambassadors and ministers of Latin America and the Secretary of State of the same table and discuss with as a subset of the world has there ever been such a complete mobilization for any one purpose of such unanimity of opinion and oneness of purpose. One cannot help but be struck with this from the reports which have come from the many delegations of women who have visited the President and presented to him their plan for ending war.

Convinced by His Reasoning.

"Many times he has been at variance and the same table and discuss with as affected by the war and other problems are the substance of the world have visited the President in his efforts to preserve peace in this country. The ornation which form the Pan-American novement, which may grow the have visited the President in his efforts of the world which the world when the women have listened to his calm reasoning they have invariably felt the force of his arguments and have left the White House determined that they would support the President in his efforts of the practical politician or the secretary the president in his efforts of the practical politician or the secretary his arguments and have left the White House determined that they would support the President in his efforts to preserve peace in this country. The organized womanhood of the United States are almost without exception standing solidly by the President in his efforts. No appeal of the practical politician or the scream of the American eagle, as voiced by some alarmist, has power to move them. Nor has the hope of benefiting financially by big war contracts warped their determination. Without exception, they have stood for peace, believing that the words of the Scripture are true, that the country that lives by the sword shall perish by the sword."

With two exceptions all the naanity. With two exceptions all the nations now at war profess Christianity. It is science that has brought into service all the improved methods of killing men. Science has furnished the forty-two-centimeter gun, smokeless powder, the aeroplane, the mine and the submarine. Education has supplied the statesmen, the literate soldiers, the officers and the engineers. Civilization has given the precepts of service, the ambulance, the surgeon, the nurse and the Red Cross. Agriculture furnishes the food and clothing, without which men could not fight.

"In the nature of things, this conflict cannot long continue. Already the greatest peacemaker in immediate view may be dimly seen. The gaunt specter of hunger may be seen amid the fogs of Flanders and the frosts of the Carpathians. If warring nations will not listen to reason, if they are deaf to the voice of religion, if they turn aside from the plea of pity, they will not be indifferent to the arguments of hunger. A greater curse than war may after all destroy war. The voice of neutral nations is feeble. But the mobilized armies of neutrals are mighty.

Mrs. Izetta Jewel Brown read a peace poem, and Mrs. William Read and Richard Backing rendered several solos.

Would Be Ready to Fight Fire.

"There is one plank in our platform which I cannot subscribe. I do not ant to put the fire engines out of commission when there is a conflagration raging, with no rain in sight and a high wind blowing. I think it is the part of wisdom to be ready to fight fire. Our Capitol has been burned once—remember our plight in 1811-1815. Lest we forget. Let us keep the peace here, if we have to fight for it.

"The remedy?—more democracy, a 'Lest we forget.' Let us keep the peace here, if we have to fight for it.
"The remedy?—more democracy, a larger electorate. See what a mess the United States in the foreign situation.

men have made of the world! At least woman could do no worse! We have miserably failed, and I for one invite the women to come in and save the fragments. In my faint view into the future I see war averted only by justice—equal rights and equal privileges to all men and women of all pations is the one barrier against war that will prove effective.

"Vested privileges of a sex or divine rights of kings and queens, of kaisers and emperors, of sultans and sheiks, of bosses and millionaires, must all go into the scrap heap before war ends. The peace for which I am looking will not be found in the councils of prime ministers, nor yet in the peace pulgers of be found in the councils of prime min-isters, nor yet in the peace palaces of The Hague. When it really comes, and come it will, it will be in the hearts and homes of the free men and women of all nations, when there will be no longer any divine right except that of the people—no more heirs apparent to be slain, but a universal entente and alliance of all nations."

Party Platform Outlined.

With two exceptions all the nature of the armillion woman members of the party.

Miss Kate Devereux Blake told of the children's peace petition, which was presented to Secretary Bryan today. She indicted teachers for causing the war, declaring that they teach it to the children as soon as they go to school. As a teacher, she said, she felt that she alone was to blame for the European conflict.
